FINANCIAL HONESTY.

REMARKS OF HON. MARTIN I. TOWNSEND, OF NEW YORK.

We print the following extracts from the forcible remarks of Hon. Martin I. Townsend, of New York in the debate on the bill for repealing the Resumption Act. In the House on Thursday last:

Mr. Townsend; of New York. As I understand it, the pending bill relates to a repeal of the law requiring the payment of greenbacks after the 1st day of January, 1879, in silver, or gold, or whatever shall then be the coin of the country. I do not understand that the bill which the House passed a week ago last Monday is under discussion. I understand that the question before this House is simply what will be the effect upon the people of this country and upon its prosperity if, on and after the 1st day of January, 1879, the Government pays its bills in specie.

We are told here that all the evils from Pandora's box will come upon the people of this country if the money in the laboring-man's hands is made equal to gold. The gentleman from Georgia [Mr. Felton] has talked here at will about it, and I understand his argument it is this: The poor man is entitled to be paid in "a poor currency." If that is not his argument, God knows what it is; I do not. "You are ruining the laboring-man if you give him currency as good as gold." "You are ruining the business man if you give him currency as good as gold." And you don't here and strive to cheat the laboring-man of the country in the attempt to play the demagogue; that is all there is of it. I know I am using strong terms, but I am simply characterizing this pretense under which it seems that "something terrible" is to be done.

Sir, if I were to believe the spirit of the tonsilin which public matters have been discussed since this House met, I should believe that my country was worse than Sodom, was worse than Gomorrah. Everything has been done wrong, intentionally wrong; and that is the only view taken of Lunsan conduct. They tell us about what terrible things the national banks are. May be they are; I am not going to say a word in their favor. But what have they to do with the question whether your Government is to redeem its bills in coin?

The idea seems to be to get somebody angry about the United States banks, and then to get them to vote to cut their own throats. Why, sir, if these banks must be abolished. Very well, if that is done deliberately and wisely I have no fault to find with that. Now, what is proposed to be done? To abolish these banks at one fell swoop. If you do abolish the national banks, what are you going to do with the thousand millions of dollars indebtedness of poor debtors, the pauper debtors but poor debtors who cannot pay at once? Why, sir, that is the veriest nonsense, the veriest weakness in the world, and would cause wide-spread destruction and bankruptcy, and all, it is alleged, in the interest of the debtor class.

We have heard some talk about the gentleman from New York [Mr. Chittenden] being a bondholder. He has said so is not he? But when you talk about men being debtors, I cannot see that it can one. I understand what it is to be indebt, I am sorry it is so. But the proposition, made in hostility to the national banks, that they shall be wiped out of existence, means that every debtor whose debt is being carried by the banks shall be compelled to pay it once or break. Gentlemen on the other side talk about the howl against the Lunsan. We shall have bankruptcy enough, God knows, if that sort of policy is adopted.

But this is not a party question. I see on the other side some gentlemen who all last winter tried to make a man by the name of Samuel J. Tilden President of the United States. I live in a State where he was once governor. In 1875 he urged it upon legislature to re-enact for the State of New York the national law in regard to the resumption of specie payments; and there it stands to-day on the statute-book with the signature of Samuel J. Tilden. Whatever gloss I have said of him, (for I stumped some part of the country against him,) I never said he was a regular; I never said he did not propose to pay the people of the country in specie.

But for a moment I want to look into the business of the national banks and the bondholders. Do not gentlemen who are so bitter in talking about these bondholders know that some $300,000,000 to $400,000,000 of the bonds of the United States are held by the savings banks, and that the savings banks are the treasury of the poor? Yet gentlemen denounce the bondholders; and in doing so they are undertaking to destroy the security by which the poor man has laid up for himself a pittance to support him and his dear ones in the evening of his life.

This attack upon everybody and everything is like Pat's work. When he found that a branch of a tree shaded his window he swore by his Maker that he would have it down. He climbed the tree and went to sawing; but he stood outside his saw, and when he had sawed the limb off Pat came to the ground with it. This howl of the democratic party is sawing the limb off between themselves and the tree! [Laughter.]

But, Mr. Speaker, I defy the majority of this House, I defy the Senate, I defy the President to carry back the shadow on the dial. Noon has struck; resumption has come within a hair's breadth. Last year our imports were less than our exports by $183,000,000, and the latter have carried gold down toward greenbacks by about 8 per cent. There is now spread out over this broad land a crop that will bring next year from Europe $280,000,000 over and above all we import; and if $183,000,000 have caused the reduction of 8 or 8½ per cent. in gold, the wealth now lying upon the ground will do the rest.

We have such an abundance of crops as we never had before. North and west, of the Ohio, north of Missouri, north of Kansas, there is now lying upon the soil twelve hundred million bushels of corn. We have a crop of cotton equal to the best. Europe is in such a situation that she must have it all. Europe is in such a situation that she must pay for it. [It will go there.] We are going to share in that prosperity, mistaken politicians, political harpies, or enthusiastic friends of the people to the contrary notwithstanding. [Great laughter.]

I now see my friend from Indiana [Mr. Hunter] and there is one thing I wish to call his attention to. He said shylocks were taking the life out of the country. I want to tell him, what he knows as well as I do, that in the North west since 1875, the current rate of interest has been reduced 2 per cent. and more. And, sir, let me say this, in addition: I care not for the statistics of my friend from Kansas; [Mr. Phillips;] I care not for the statistics of my learned and excellent friend from Pennsylvania, [Mr. Kelley;] I care not for the statistics of my gallant friend from Illinois. [Mr. Harrison,] [laughter;] but, sir, I do wish to say that for the last two years there has been more money to be loaned, seeking investment, that could not be loaned and could not find investment than has ever been in this country since the Declaration of Independence. And yet we are told we want more money.

Now, sir, there is much else I was going to say, but I see my time is used up, and I believe I will stop in the fullness of my strength. [Laughter.]

STOUGHTON ON BLACK.

Hon. E. W. Stoughton having effectually replied in the North American Review to an article in that magazine by ex-Judge Jeremiah Black, assailing the Electoral Commission, the latter prepared a tirade of partisan invective and personal abuse which the Review declined to publish and which he then gave to the N. Y. Sun. The World also quoted a portion of it and since publishes the following brief but scathing rejoinder of Mr. Stoughton:

To the Editor of the New York World.

It will doubtless be a disappointment to the many admirers of Judge Black that he so long delayed his threatened reply to an article written by me and published in the September number of the North American Review. He has been hitherto supposed to possess, for ready use, exhaustless resources for invention, perversion, vituperation, and personal abuse, and his long delay to employ these against me created the impression that, with unabating years, these resources were failing him.

His pamphlet addressed to me, and just published in the Sun, and in part in the World, should quite relieve his friends from this apprehension. They must perceive that this, his latest production, develops, in full vigor, the qualities for which he was so distinguished. Indeed, a very moderate knowledge of natural history should have taught them to expect this, for it is well known that the fangs of the serpent become blunted by age, and its ability to insert them into its victim diminished, the quantity of poisonous matter accumulates in proportion, and although this is discharged more slowly and with less efficiency, the capacity of the reptile for mischief is but little impaired.

I shall not trouble the public, nor misuse your columns by any attempt to imitate Judge Black in these respects. I am not ambitious to share a reputation seldom sought, never envied, although not difficult to attain.

I alluded in the Review to the official acts, and to the consequences to our country at a time when it was in great peril, and to the Attorney-General and responsible law advisor of the Government. He asserts that I have falsified and misstated his opinion as such, and also the views of his chief, Mr. Buchanan, as contained in his Message to Congress near the close of his Presidential term.

Judge Black carefully abstains from presenting quotations from these papers to sustain his assertion. I invite all who may read his article to carefully peruse both of these documents, and draw their own conclusions as to the accuracy of my statement that when rebellion threatened the nation with destruction the President and his Attorney-General united in officially declaring that this Government had no constitutional power to suppress the revolt by force.

Judge Black also denies that the highest court of Louisiana had determined that the decision of the Returning Board of that State was conclusive, and could not be reversed or reviewed by its courts. A perusal of the case by me, cited in the Review, and reported in the twenty-fifty volume of the Louisiana Annual Reports for 1875, page 305, will dispose of this denial.

He also fosters that Chief-Justice Chase of this State, did not write the letter quoted by me. By referring to the New York Times publish d the 25th of February last an authentic copy of that letter will be found, dated the 10th of that month.

Gently retaining Judge Black that with his excellent constitution and a right use of his remarkable talents, guided by an improved taste, he may yet hope to retrieve a reputation not entirely liable for pathetism, or for patchy of style as a controversialist, and reminding him also that even the most acute and ignorant of men do not long reverence as their superior a person who in law house and brutality of expression descends to their own level, I am, etc

E. W. STOUGHTON.

THE PISE PHILLIPS CONTROVERSY

THE EX-SECRETARY IN RESPONSE TO THE ORATOR'S DISCOURSE IN PHILADELPHIA —MISSTATEMENTS CORRECTED.

[From the N. Y. Herald.]

GARFIELD'S New Hampshire—Evening.

One of your reporters called on me this afternoon toward dusk, as I was on the point of going to the railroad station to meet one of my family who was returning, unattended, from a visit to a sick and suffering relative.

I had read in your paper of yesterday the report of Mr. Wendell Phillips' discourse in Philadelphia on the evening of the 15th inst., and had found in it nothing to sustain his previous charges against General Grant and myself beyond a stale repetition of what had been disproved and a fresh batch of vituperation and loose talk. An editorial in your paper of this morning paper furnished all the reply or notice which seemed to me to be needed. I have desired, ever since Mr. Sumner's death, to escape the necessity of any allusion to the estrangement, which, to my great regret, unfortunately existed between him and myself during the last two or three years of his life. I still cherish that desire, and had seen nothing in the report of Mr. Phillips' Philadelphia speech that seemed to call for any notice from me; and supposing that his address last evening in New York was but a repetition I had not thought it worth the time of a careful perusal. Its heading captions had mainly attracted my notice.

Pressed for time to meet the lady who was about to drive alone in a snowstorm, and at dark, when your reporter called, I desired to avoid any "interview." He asked several questions, and I simply authorized him to say that, having called to the counter some of Mr. Phillips' false coins, I felt no necessity of doing any more, as Mr. Phillips was sure to coin and pass in circulation others of equal falsity faster than I or any one else could nail them behind the former.

MISSTATEMENTS CORRECTED.

Your reporter, either during the few minutes that he was at my house or while riding with me to the station, called my attention to a letter cited by Mr. Phillips addressed by me to Mr. Motley. The language of the letter was familiar to me, but I was not aware of the use which Mr. Phillips had made of it. I replied that probably such a letter had been written; that it had been officially published, and its accuracy could be tested. I am under obligation to your reporter for bringing it to my notice. Since my return home I have carefully examined the report of the speech as published in the Herald of this morning. Mr. Phillips says:—

But, again, how much can Grant's memory be depended on after seven years? The General says that in June, 1870, he was "very angry" with Motley and wanted to dismiss him, and he and Fish should have done so, but for fear of stirring up Sumner they decided only to censure him severely, and ordered him to abstain entirely from doing anything more. And Fish wrote and sent such a letter. Now we have that letter published by the government. It reads thus:

WASHINGTON, JUNE 28, 1870.

Your general presentation, and that treatment of the general subjects discussed in that interview with the English Minister), meet the approval of this department.

Then follows one exception and the despatch concludes.

In the meantime you may be well occupied to rest the question on the very forcible presentation you have made of the American side of the question. It was strongly done, and if there were expressed by the instructions the excess of right direction, and, stopping where they do and uttered as they were, it may well be hoped that they may tend to impress the Minister with the seriousness of our appreciation of the grievances we have sustained.

The letter from which Mr. Phillips quotes was published in January, 1871, in Senate Executive Document No. 11, of the third session of the Forty-first Congress, on pages 10 and 11. I send you a copy of that document for your examination. The letter bears date June 28, 1869; but it suits Mr. Phillips, purpose to misdate and to represent it as having been written June 28, 1870. The use which he seeks to make of this letter precludes the possibility of any charity to be felt for the author of it date from the charge of wilful misrepresentation.

It may be worth while in this connection to refer to the fact that in his citation of the letter he suppresses the following passage:

He (the President) wishes that whenever negotiations or discussion on the subject of the "Alabama claims" be entered into, they may be conducted in Washington, and he desires that at this time you should convey this wish to Mr. Motley.

Motley's Minister of Foreign Affairs.

I refer to this simply to show that as early date Motley before any "definite treaty existed" something had occurred which induced the President to withdraw the future discussion of the "Alabama claims" question which had been referred to the legation in London from that to Washington. Again Mr. Phillips says:

It is admitted that a few days after the St. Domingo (treaty) defeat Motley was asked to resign, and at the opening of the very next session Sumner was relieved of that chairmanship which he had filled for ten years.

The treaty was defeated in June, 1870. The next session of Congress opened in December, 1870, when Mr. Sumner was appointed chairman of the Committee on Foreign Relations. This proposition, one of another of Mr. Phillips' most eminents, and also of the idea that Mr. Sumner's failure to be reappointed was in consequence of his opposition to the Santo Domingo Treaty. Had that opposition been the cause it would have been in December, 1870, when the committees were reorganized for the first time after the defeat of the treaty. Mr. Sumner's failure to be reappointed did not take place until the succession of the Senate, which began in March, 1871. Evidently, accuracy of statement and a regard for truth did not prevail among Mr. Phillips' surroundings.

Very respectfully.

CULTIVATING WHEAT.

We have become so used to having poor yields of wheat that good yields, such as are reported from many sections this year, startled us, and these reports are generally discredited by those who have no stronger evidence than newspaper item. Many of these reports are exaggerated, no doubt, and a story never loses anything by the telling, but the accounts coming correct from first hands frequently swell to gross exaggeration before they have travelled far. We have received several remonstrances from readers for publishing such reports. One lady writes that he don't believe it, and forgets his husband per acre has been several in this country this year, and calls upon the men who make such reports to prove their assertions. We have no doubt the greater yields than the 45 bushels reported, and further, we think that greater yields than have been reported this year are possible, and this brings us to the point we intended to write about when we commenced that of cultivating wheat. We have just been reading an account of experiments in England in cultivating wheat and cultivating it like corn, with the seed was planted in drills, one foot apart and four inches apart in the rows, spaces between the drill rows were constantly cultivated until the plants had attained sufficient growth to thicken and tiller. The result was eighty-five bushels per acre. Another experiment with rows 28 inches apart, and the plants three inches apart in the rows, resulted in a yield of seventy-two bushels per acre. Other experiments are given in which even greater yields were reported by the method of growing wheat. We do not claim that the cultivation above practiced by these extraordinary yields, but we think was due to it, for we do not know any such crops from ordinary culture. Neither do we claim that farmers generally, in this country, can secure such yields. But we do claim that it is much better than can be obtained as we have been getting. We would suggest that farmers test this matter on a small patch of ground—a square rod or more. Have it accurately measured, put it in the best condition, and see what it will produce. Every one of your readers who reads what can do this will not say inconvenience. How many will agree to do so, and report the result next year? There is no mere sense about this matter. If it is beneficial to other crops to hoe and cultivate them, why not to wheat? The principle is the same. If it will pay we ought to know it, and we will never find out without trying. You may have no plow to cultivate the square and with the hand hoe, but if it is found to increase the crop to an extent that will justify the work, implements for cultivating by horse power will be speedily forthcoming.—Farmer.

A TRIMMER PILLORIED IN HIS RECORD.

"The spectre that haunts the dreams of THE BANGOR WHIG AND COURIER just now is the striking from the army register the names of battles in which regiments have been engaged during the war. Probably after the Secretary of War has seen Captain Boutelle's protest he will revoke the order."—Boston Globe, Nov. 17, 1877.

Captain Boutelle presents to the author of the above all the compliments appropriate to the occasion and invites him to a perusal of some editorial extracts from a journal named the Boston Daily Globe, on the subject referred to.

[From the Boston Globe Dec. 8 ... six days after ... introduced the bill to ex... the battle ... ons.]

The coming Legislature was chosen upon the very issues made up by Mr. Sumner between himself and the President, and it is for that body to give early utterance to the voice of Massachusetts by a single resolution of ... ... the record ... resolve...

[From the ... Boston Globe, February, 1874 ... the Massachusetts resolution ...]

The action of the Massachusetts Legislature upon the Sumner resolutions a year ago will undoubtedly be rescinded in accordance with the expressed will of the people. What here has been ... feeling or opinion ... the Senator but his fellow citizens, in consideration of his life long devotion to the cause of freedom and the ... with which he has defended the reputation and maintained the interests of the Commonwealth ... are willing to obliterate from the record any appearance of ... desire for what was really no more than the expression of opinion.

There are few ... who would ... the names of the battles in the ... of the Union. WE CANNOT KILL HISTORY. The fact that for five years civil war devastated the fairest part of this country is written in letters that will never fade. Peace—perfect peace—and the renewal of brotherly feeling between the North and South, is the ardent desire of every patriotic heart but it can never be brought about by the means proposed. AS LONG AS THE TATTERED BANNERS ... THE INSCRIPTIONS ... but there is no need of a like perpetuation of the resolutions of censure on Senator Sumner.

Captain Boutelle expressed his honest convictions on this subject in similar terms in 1872 and 1874 and he is modestly maintaining them to-day. Perhaps the Globe thinks that it cuts a charming figure in the pillory of its own record!

THE COLLAPSE OF SOUTHERN REPUBLICANISM.

[From the New York Times Nov. 1.]

When the so-called new Southern policy was first adopted there were a number of the ... troublesome ... on ... political ... —who wanted to know how it would affect the Republican party in the cotton States. ... the assurances so often repeated that it would bring about ... prosperity ... The promises of a revival of the ... them, they had been Republicans ... they had fought ... risked their lives for human liberty ... representation of the Union ... temptation of republican principles ... they ... ired that ... efforts had not been in vain. Mr. ... Mitt ... and other new disciples ... were shrewd enough to ... and done ... to ... the feelings of ... protested ... with much apparent confidence that the ... of the new policy was the ... that had been ... for ... the return ... to ... tradition ... South ... Democracy ... WHIGS were only too anxious to ... Bourbons ... that they would ... embrace the opportunity to join hands with the Republicans in their effort to ... out the last ditch rebel element. The Republican ... not altogether ... with the glowing promises ... they doubted ... yet tried to be patient and to wait.

What a ... ! Weeks upon weeks have gone by and still there is no sign of the breaking up of the Southern Democracy. The expected compromise on the Speakership did not occur and the much ... Administration Democrats have not yet been heard of in the House. The leaders of the dominant party in the cotton States have simply accepted as a right very concession made by the Republican President. They have given nothing in return. The old Whigs have not made their appearance, the Democrats are more united than ever before; "the solid South" is no longer what Mr. Matthews was pleased to call a political bugbear, it is a stern political reality. In Georgia and Mississippi the Republican Party has been officially buried, in South Carolina it exists no longer even in name, in Louisiana its disorganization is complete. It withstood all the terrors of the White League, the bullets of the Rifle Clubs and the whip of the bull-dozer in spite of HAMBURG, COUSHATTA, VICKSBURG, EUFAULA, and NEW ORLEANS its members went to the polls and voted for the principles they loved so well, but at last they were obliged to yield to a power greater than any they had faced before. They succumbed to "the reconciliation policy" and they are heard of no more in American politics.

In the face of this year's elections it would be useless to attempt to conceal the fact that the Republican Party of the South has been annihilated. As a political force it ceased to exist some months since. At the last election it ceased to be even a political factor. One year ago the Republican sentiment of the Southern States—and we do not include Maryland, Kentucky, or Missouri—was represented by a record of nine hundred thousand votes cast for Rutherford B. Hayes. At the recent elections the party placed no candidates in the field, and as an organization deposited no votes in the ballot boxes. At the Alabama county and legislative elections held in August, there was no opposition to the candidates of "the native and best." The much abused "carpet-bagger" was not heard of, and "the political nigger" wisely declined to go to the polls. On the 6th of this month, in the Mississippi and Virginia State elections, the Republican Party did not appear. In the former State there are at least 85,000 men who profess Republican principles, but in the election referred to they did not, as an organization, cast one vote for State officers. The result can- not fail to be a gratifying one to those persons who delight in conciliation. The Democrats carried the State by a majority of about one hundred thousand, with a number of back counties still to hear from. Mississippi's next Legislature will be a harmonious body. The Senate, consisting of thirty-six members, is unanimously Democratic, and of the one hundred and twenty members of the lower house, one hundred and eighteen are Democrats and two are Republicans. The seats of the latter are contested, however, and they will probably have to wait some time for their pay and mileage.

It will be remembered that there was an independent movement in Mississippi which originated some time before the last election, and which was pointed to at the time as a direct outgrowth of "the new policy." It was controlled, as we were told, by lifelong Democrats, gentlemen of high standing, natives of the State, who approved the course of the President, and desired to support him. They were to unite with the Republicans, protect the freedmen in their political rights, and break up the Democracy. How they succeeded may be inferred from the vote just given and from the fact that after they ... announced their purpose they were regarded as little better than the negroes and treated with about the same consideration. Two of them were murdered in the good old Ku Klux fashion, a number were obliged to seek safety in flight, and in nearly every instance the candidates were forced to withdraw before the day of election. It is only just to add that the canvass in Virginia was a remarkably peaceable one. The negroes did not go to the polls, and no riots are reported. Of course the election was perfectly free and fair. There were seven Republicans ... in Sudbury ... and three in Richmond.

HONEST MONEY.

MASTERLY SPEECH BY GEN. GARFIELD—HIS ARGUMENT FOR RESUMPTION INDORSED BY ABRAM S. HEWITT.

Hon. James A. Garfield's speech in the House Friday in opposition to the repeal of the Resumption act, was one of the ablest ever delivered in Congress upon the financial question, and has been the subject of general remark on both sides. The advocates of repeal are considerably annoyed over the speech, as it has completely broken down all the sophistries that have been advanced in support of repudiation. In discussing the financial question Judge Kelley, one of the ablest men on the inflation side, has invariably quoted largely from English authorities in support of his peculiar notions. Mr. Garfield referred to the authorities upon which Judge Kelley has placed so much reliance and showed that Sir Archibald Allison, as a financial writer, is utterly without credit in his own country, and quoted from the records of the House of Commons to show that the year in which Sir Archibald says there was great prosperity in England the expenditure of the English government exceeded its receipts by $225,000,000. He showed from the same records that when a motion was made to repeal the Resumption act the same arguments were used that are now being used in this country, but the House of Commons by a vote of 141 to 17, rejected the motion to repeal. This action of the House of Commons, he thought, was a complete refutation of the theories of Allison and Doubleday, who wrote their so-called history 30 years after the events about which they wrote had transpired. Instead of the resumption act being the cause of distress in England, Mr. Garfield showed that it was entirely owing to the corn laws which induced the English people to miss ... in such quantities that it ... the agriculturist of that country. He argued that every great financial crisis that had occurred in England and in this country had been preceded by a large issue of paper money which had induced extravagant speculation, and naturally resulted in great depression and prostration. He denied that the resumption of specie payment will injure the debtor class. The presumption that the poor people are the debtor class was erroneous, and he asserted that the great majority of the creditor class are composed of poor people, and that the debtor class is the rich. A poor man cannot go into debt because he cannot obtain credit. Credit can only be obtained upon property that has fixed value and this the poor man does not have. This class take their money which is the result of their savings and place it where it will earn something. He quoted statistics to sustain this theory, and showed that on January last there were over 1,700 savings banks in the country with deposits amounting to $1,377,000,000. This money was deposited by 2,500,000 who had thus deposited their savings that they might be loaned to business men to enlarge their business beyond their capital.

Mr. Garfield also explained the assertion, so frequently made in Congress and elsewhere that the bondholders are capitalists and wealthy men. He showed that in one city, in which $116,000 of Government bonds are held by 106 persons only eight men of the number hold over $10,000 each, while 152 of the number range from $50 to $150 each. Sixty of the number are widows, guardians of minor children, and 12 laborers, mechanics, farmers, ministers and other men of slender means who put their money into bonds that it might be safe. He also quoted statistics from life insurance companies to show that the poor man goes into life insurance simply to provide for his family after his death, and that out of about 300,000 policies scattered over several States the average insurance was only $2,200. All the assets of these companies are loaned out, and the companies are simply the agents of the poor man. Applying these facts he argued that to do anything that could let down the value of the greenback would cut down the principle and interest of all of these vast sums invested by poor men for the benefit of their families, and it would also cut down their daily wages in the same proportion. It is estimated that there is daily due the laboring men of this country $120,000,000 for their labor, and to cut down the value of greenbacks 10 per cent. would shrivel $12,000,000 off the earnings of the laboring class.

He denounced in severe terms legislation that would produce such effects as these, and argued that of all schemes to rob the poor man, none was so cunning as that for the issue and maintenance of irredeemable paper. He denied that the present depression was owing to the Resumption act, but contended that it was attributable to the issue of paper money and the extravagant speculation that attended it. The war added enormously to consumption and reduced the sources of production by taking 1,000,000 men from the ranks of producers and adding that number to the ranks of consumers. The termination of the war brought things back to their normal condition, and we have since then been gradually getting back to a specie basis. We must get back to that basis gradually, and unless we are to guide ourselves by law we will get down to it by a most disastrous fall.

Referring to the oft-repeated argument that greenbacks put down the rebellion, he said that if this theory held good some gentleman on the other side might answer, if paper money had in it the elements of success the confederacy would not have been overcome because they had more paper than we had, and it had the additional quality of not being redeemable until six months after the recognition of the Southern Confederacy. Resumption was not intended to discredit the greenback, but to dignify and glorify it. When the greenback dollar is made two and one-half cents higher we will have two hundred millions of gold to sustain it. We don't want to make the greenback worse, but to make it better, and the integrity of the Resumption act is demanded by public faith, the best interests of the country, and our future prosperity, and there is no danger to the greenback except that which threatens it by the Congress of the United States.

Mr. Garfield's speech was listened to throughout with great attention by members on both sides, and on its conclusion he was warmly applauded and congratulated by both Republicans and Democrats.

Mr. Hewitt of New York, who followed, said he had prepared a speech upon the bill before the House, but the gentleman from Ohio, (Mr. Garfield) had traversed almost the same ground he (Mr. Hewitt) intended to take. He concurred fully in what the gentleman said in regard to the present situation, and with regard to the necessity of adhering firmly to the policy of resumption.

TELEGRAPHING WITHOUT WIRES.

THE LATEST TELEGRAPHIC WONDER.

The Washington correspondent of the Hartford Times sends the following to his paper: In these days of telephonic wonders, nothing, if it is within the range of anything like probability, surprises us. Information has reached here recently that Professor Loomis, who has been in the mountainous regions of West Virginia for some months conducting a series of experiments with his proposed aerial telegraphy, has demonstrated finally that telegraphing without wires is practical. His manner of operating, which has on a previous occasion been described in this correspondence, has been endorsed by many scientists. It consists of running a wire up to a certain altitude, reaching a particular current of electricity, which according to Professor Loomis, can be found at various heights. At any distance away, this same current can be reached by a similar wire and communication can be had immediately. The apparatus necessary to bring about this wonder is very simple and inexpensive. It has been fully ascertained that telegraphic communication does not take place over or through the wires used, but through the ground. This same communication continues when these electric currents supplied by nature are used. Professor Loomis has, as said before, telegraphed to parties eleven miles distant by merely sending up a kite, at each end of the distance a certain height, attached to which in place of the ordinary string was a fine copper wire. When both kites, though eleven miles distant from each other, touched the same current, communication was had between them both, and messages were sent from one end to the other by means of the ordinary Morse instrument in connection with the instrument invented by Professor Loomis. This showed that the theory on which he had worked for many years was the correct one, and that by the proper means, such as stationary wire arranged from natural or artificial eminences, could be operated successfully at all times. It is true that aerial telegraphy may not be much of a certainty during violent storms or electric showers, but it will not meet with more obstructions than the ordinary wire telegraphing which is not at all sure during the periods spoken of. It will be a long time before aerial telegraphing can be carried on between places which are but a short distance apart, if, indeed, it ever will. In such cases the wires will continue to be used, though for long distances such as for telegraphing from one side of the ocean to another, the aerial telegraph will take its place entirely. Professor Loomis has a scheme now on foot for a series of experiments from a point on one of the highest peaks on the Alps in Switzerland, to a similarly situated place in the Rocky Mountains on this side of the world. If this succeeds, of course his invention will rank in importance with that of the electric telegraph itself, and be even greater than that of the telephone. All of the money necessary to carry on the experiments has already been promised, and it will not be many years if it turns out to be a success, before ocean cables will be one of the lost arts as having played its part. It will be laid aside. The cost of aerial telegraphy will not be over one cent where the other is one thousand dollars.

"SUPERB CHEEK."

[From the Indianapolis Journal.]

The following precious missive has been made public by Governor Williams:

AUSTIN, Texas, Oct. 12.

His Excellency James D. Williams, Governor of Indiana:

DEAR SIR:—In behalf of the surviving members of the Eighth Texas Regiment better known as the "Terry Rangers," I have been requested to write to you and ask—if it can be done—that you will send by express to Colonel W. B. Sayres, Gonzales, Texas, who will pay the charges, the battle-flag of said regiment, which was lost Oct. 13, 1864, in the battle near Coosaville, Ga., and is now in the library of the State House of your State.

Now that the war is over, and ancient friendships are being restored, it would be a souvenir of the dead whom this command left on the field of honor to have their old standard returned to them. It will be another evidence that we are indeed friends again, and I have clasped our hands in fraternal union. I have the honor to be yours, respectfully,

R. B. HUBBARD,
Governor of Texas.

This modest request seems to be in harmony with the spirit of the times, but as was said by the man who declined to invite his mother-in-law to his party. We must draw the line somewhere. "If the field of honor" is good. The Governor of Texas no doubt has been reading what the President said at Atlanta about the Greeks.

The question that presents itself to our minds is what do you want with a rebel flag now? Governor Hubbard says its return "will be another evidence that we are again friends." We had supposed that the basis of our renewed friendship was a devotion of all to the Union. We have been told that the rebel flag and the "bloody shirt" were to be buried in the same grave. We do not see what use any man has for a rebel flag if he loves the Union flag. We would think a loyal Governor of a sovereign State would want to cultivate in his people a love for the stars and stripes and want them to forget the stars and bars. In this case neither the Governor of this State nor the Colonel of the regiment the Seventeenth Indiana, has any more control over the flag than any private soldier of the regiment.

Although "Blue Jeans" Williams is Governor of Indiana, he is fortunately, not the custodian of the property of the State or the trophies won by its loyal soldiers. State Librarian Connor, of Indiana, is a man of a different stamp, and this is what he has to say about that Texas battle-flag:

State Librarian Connor, of Indiana, has this to say about that Texas battle flag: "Being custodian of the rebel flag which the Governor of Texas desires returned, I simply have to say that while I have control of it it will remain in the State Library. It is a trophy of the heroism of my comrades of Indiana, both living and dead, and if the Governor of Texas cannot be 'pacified' without its return, he and his soldiers of the 'lost cause' will have to go unpacified."

The article which we quote elsewhere from the N. Y. Times affords the best commentary upon some cold blooded remarks in the Boston Advertiser of Saturday, which especially excited our disgust. That New England Journal which measures principle with a yard stick and offsets human rights with a balance of trade, now, with calm effrontery abandons all its arguments that the "policy" was to strengthen the Republican Party, and confesses the abandonment of nearly a million Republican citizens in these words:

As to the collapse of Southern Republicanism, there is nothing to do but to admit the fact, and go to work again to build it up from the foundation.

And to add insult to injury it brutally adds:

This is hardly a matter of regret, when it is seen of what shadowy and unsubstantial material that party was made. It had not one element of enduring life.

The section of the Republican party thus contemptuously surrendered to annihilation, comprised nearly a million voters, constituted a large majority in a number of States; was made up of peaceable and law-abiding citizens and lacked only the "elements" of armed organization and treasonable sentiments, to entitle it to recognition at the White House and obsequious respect in Boston.

The "child-like and bland" special of the Boston Journal telegraphed Saturday's papers as follows concerning the nomination of Lawrence:

He is the partner of Gov. Warmoth, who has been here at work for him, and it is asserted that he will at once commence the formation of an administration party in Louisiana with the Warmoth wing of the Republicans there as a nucleus.

The Washington special of the New York Herald on the same day presented a different view as follows:

Louisiana Democrats regard the nomination of Mr. Effingham Lawrence to be Collector of New Orleans with satisfaction. They say that so far the President's appointments in their State are not of a kind to make a break in the Democratic ranks.

Mr Swan called up the bill appropriating $150 000 for representation at the Paris Exposition

Mr Luckey raised the question of consideration, that is whether the House would now consider that bill, and the vote resulted yeas 144, nays 123. The House then went into Committee of the Whole on the Paris exposition bill

The bill and various amendments having been read, Mr Swann Chairman of the Committee on Foreign Affairs sent to the Clerk's desk and had read the report of the Committee on the subject. He then proceeded to express his views orally but it was impossible to hear a word which he uttered beyond an area of a few feet and therefore members who had any curiosity on the subject surrounded him in a very ... narrow circle

Mr Hamilton sent to the Clerk's desk and had read the report of the minority adverse to making any appropriation out of the Treasury for the purpose proposed. He spoke in support of that view placing it on the ground of popular demand for economy and retrenchment. He said he had voted for the repeal of the obnoxious resumption act, for the bill to remonetize silver and for the reduction of the army, and he would vote against any expenditure of public money for such a purpose as that proposed in this bill.

Mr Calkins, saying that his district contained several large manufacturing establishments which were much interested in the matter, advocated the bill.

He sent to the clerk's desk and had read a letter from the president of a large wagon manufacturing company at South Bend, urging the importance of action on the subject and he said it was the universal feel-ing among such men that Congress ought to make a liberal appropriation so that the country might be suitably represented at the Exposition

Mr. Williams, of Wis favored the bill but without action the Committee rose and the House adjourned ...

THE SENATE REPUBLICANS.

Another Caucus Held.

REPORT OF THE PRESIDENTIAL INTERVIEW.

The President Anxious for Party Harmony.

Even the Administration Senators Convinced that Appointing Democrats in the South is a Mistake.

Report of the Committee who Visited the White House

WASHINGTON Nov 17 A caucus of Republican Senators was held at the Capitol this afternoon. There was a full attendance as the proceedings were expected to be of importance. Mr Edmunds and various other Senators who waited upon the President last Tuesday evening to acquaint him with the general tenor and spirit of the comments expressed by a majority of the Republican Senators in the first caucus concerning his civil service policy etc gave to the caucus to-day a verbal account of what occurred at the interview

The President's Explanation

They reported the President in response to their statements of the wide-spread uneasiness and dissatisfaction which had been created among his party friends by his appointments of Democrats to Southern offices etc had argued that his policy in this regard was not prejudicial to the interests of the Republican party and certainly was not adopted by him from any want of earnest desire for the perpetuation and maintenance of Republican power and principles

Still Looking for the Resurrection of that Old Line Whig

On the contrary it was his expectation and belief that a pursuance of this policy would promote the coalition of the old Whig and various other elements naturally opposed to the Democratic party in the South and would eventually secure six or eight Southern States for the Republicans.

Sincere in His Delusion—But glad to consult with the Republican Leaders

All the Senators who were present at the interview expressed themselves to the caucus as being convinced that the President was thoroughly sincere in this belief

They also reported that the President said he was very desirous to be in harmony with the leaders of the party and was gratified to have had an opportunity of ascertaining definitely and clearly the views which had been expressed in the caucus. Advice and candid criticisms would always be welcome to him and in closing he said he hoped and believed there would be less cause for complaint in future, and in any event if there should be a difference of opinion there would be no occasion for ill feeling and he trusted there would be none

Senators Opposed to the Policy—Free the Administration Men Disfavor Appointing Democrats in the South

After the report of which the foregoing is a brief summary had been made to the caucus a free discussion ensued as to the propriety and probable effects of the President's policy in case it should be pursued by him and acquiesced in by the Senate. An interchange of views developed an almost unanimous opinion that the policy of appointing Democrats to office in the South is not wise or sound and even those Senators who are distinctively known as friends of the Administration expressed doubts ... the fruit of which the ... desire

No Formal Action Taken

No action was taken by the caucus and none was proposed. Nothing was said about the New York Custom House appointments nor was there any discussion of the contested Senatorial election cases from Louisiana and South Carolina. The questions involved in the contest for seats in the Senate seem to be generally considered as purely judicial in their nature and are outside of caucus control

TEXAS

The Indian Raiders—Threatened Cruelty to Prisoners.

NEW YORK, Nov 17 A San Antonio despatch says several bodies of Indians crossed from Mexico into Texas in raids. Gen Ord has warned settlers on the frontier and he will follow them with troops. The Indians and Mexicans are unusually hostile on account of Bullis who destroyed their camp near Saragossa. The Indians have received large reinforcements from Northern Mexico and brag openly that any prisoners they have will have their eyes put out. They are consolidating their camps.

After a Raiding Party.

SAN ANTONIO, Nov. 19. Indians were seen twelve miles west of Fredericksburg, yesterday, and have stolen a lot of horses from this neighborhood. Citizens are in pursuit and the military has been notified. This is supposed to be one of their large parties reported on the raid. This party is going westward.

There is a new flower to be worn in ladies hats now—that makes the fashion not only an original but a useful one—the "barometrical flower," so called. This flower is of a deep blue tint, and when the atmosphere changes at the approach of rain, the blue turns to pink. Parisian ladies now wear this flower extensively in their hats, and each one discovers from the flower in her neighbor's bonnet whether it will rain or not and is thus put on her guard. We are glad to learn that there is one new fashion of the ladies particularly useful

His skull was fractured his right shoulder dislocated and one of his kneepans knocked off. It was feared he would die. Dr J John Page, acting surgeon of the ship was on deck when the accident occurred and had the unfortunate lad at once carried below and placed under treatment, and he now has almost completely recovered

RUNAWAYS Saturday afternoon a gentleman and lady drove up in front of Adams Brothers store, with a pair of horses and the gentleman stepped into the store for a few minutes. While he was gone the horses started and colliding with another team the lady was thrown over the dasher onto the whiffle-tree and dragged for some distance before the horses were stopped, so that she could be rescued from her perilous position. She was taken into Bugbee's Book store when it was found that she had escaped without receiving any injuries.—Later in the afternoon another horse started from in front of Jones clothing store, and run up Harlow street hill where it was caught without doing any damage.

THAT COAT THIEF The fellow who stole the over-coat and under-coat at F. D Pullen's clothing store on Exchange street last Friday night was arrested last night. Yesterday afternoon two men came to Mr Pullen and said that they thought they could get the clothing, and took a team and started out and in about two hours they returned with the coats. Officers Clifford and Clark got wind of this and by watching this team and making some cautious inquiries they got a clue as to where the man was and last evening about nine o'clock in company with Officer Pond and Stuart they proceeded to a house just this side of Veazie and occupied by one Michael Bulkley. They left their horses at some distance from the house and proceeded on foot. On arrival at the place they surrounded the house and then demanded admittance. A man was seen to come to and look out of one of the windows but on seeing the officers ... out back ... Officer Clifford and Clark entered the house and began searching for their man. They found that he had endeavored to hide in the ... and by the marks on the floor they traced him to the shed chamber where they found their man behind a door which had been removed from the hinge. The Convention has been a success, financially and otherwise, and much credit is due the energetic lady Miss Grace McClellan, who originated it and worked for its success

At the close of the concert resolutions were adopted thanking the Professor for his energy and ability and the singers and players from abroad who had done so much to make the Convention a success

After the concert the hall was cleared and a short dance indulged in. The orchestra was under the direction of Mr Andrews of Bangor and gave good music, but there were but few couples on the floor. It closed about half past 2 o'clock Saturday morning.

Violation of the Fishery Laws

Hon, E. M. Stillwell, State Fish Commissioner has received the following letter from Dr. John P. Ordway, President of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association

168 TREMONT STREET,
Nov 16th, 1877.

E. M. Stillwell, Esq For fear you might overlook the fact I send you the within notice. You see I am after them and our fish laws are all right. I wish I could say as much for the game laws, but cannot for the present. I trust that you will change your close time to Sept. 1st, or the 15th at the most, to the 1st of May following on trout. I was disgusted this fall at the manner in which trout were taken from the spawning beds and on their way to them. I trust you will change your close time as above.

Yours truly,
JOHN P. ORDWAY.

The following extract from the Boston Journal was enclosed in the letter.

LANDLOCKED SALMON.—Dr John P. Ordway, President of the Massachusetts Fish and Game Protective Association, on Friday caused warrants to be served on John Brohn, M. A Snell, Henry Snow and Levi Perkins, for each having in possession one land locked salmon. The warrants were served upon Gale, and this morning, before Judge Chamberlain, they all pleaded guilty and were fined $10 each without costs, it being their first offence. Our Fish Commissioners have at a large expense stocked our own waters with these fish, and the above association proposes to see that all violators of the law are punished. The close time is from the 1st of October in each year to the following 1st of April. These fish came from Ellsworth, Me., where the close time is similar to our own, and had, by the large gashes in their sides, been evidently speared on their spawning beds

WOULD, OR WOULDN'T YOU?

Supposing a youth, with his heart in his eyes,
That shone like the light of the beautiful skies,
Should pray me to love me through all of my life,
An I begged that I'd be his own dear little wife—
Guess I would—wouldn't you?
—Camden Post.

Suppose that a girl with her heart in her clothes,
And her bonnet shoved down on the bridge of her nose,
Should go for your person and pocket for life,
To be a useless, expensive and cumbersome wife—
Guess I wouldn't, would you?
—Reading Dispatch.

A THOUGHTFUL HUSBAND.

If he had confined himself to his legitimate quill-driving duties, there would have been no occasion for him to have been strutting around with his left hand in a sling, a patch on his nose and an absurd old gum shoe on one foot. He was, however, only another victim of that egotistical opinion of all men, that they can do anything better than a woman. He went home the other day and found his wife putting up peaches in those old-fashioned tin cans that closed with sealing-wax. She had an apron on, and two or three little blotches of sealing-wax ornamented the floor, while the cat under the table was licking a piece the size of a postage stamp with assiduity.

"See here, Maria," he said "you'll cripple yourself with that hot wax directly," but as she made no answer, he continued dogmatically "Women never have any mechanical genius, anyway. If there is a way of doing anything wrong they are sure to try it."

"Do you think you can do any better?" she observed, with some acidity.

"Why, of course I can."

"Well, here, just distinguish yourself, then."

So he sat down. She handed him a fresh can, just out of the hot water. He took it in his hand and dropped it as though it had been a streak of lightning, while he stuck his fingers in his mouth and looked sudden death at her because he could not swear. She gave him a towel to hold the next one with, and he took it on his knee, lighting the sealing-wax stick, and commenced proceeding around the top, but the bottom burnt his knee, and he jerked, bringing the burning wax across the back of his left hand. Then he jumped up and howled, dropped the can, which emptied a spoonful of burning preserves into his slipper. This made him frantic, and he went dancing about the kitchen like an inebriated dervish, waving the burning wax until a drop took him on the nose. In his anger he kicked the offending can through the window, scattering its contents over the dog, who rushed into the street howling and raising an alarm of mad dog, which occupied the attention of all the people within three squares. Then he submitted to be laid on the sofa, and plastered with flour and sweet oil, until he looked like a bad-prepared scarecrow. He is willing to make an affidavit the size of a barn door that he will let the women be just as awkward as they choose.—Elmira Gazette.

COAL IN MAINE.—The question is often asked have we coal in our State? There are many seams or veins of bituminous coal to be found in the clay shales and slates of our State, but they are of no extent. Our geological age dates too far back to admit of the existence of coal measures, although at the same time seams of it will be found, and have been already. They are very narrow and filled with iron pyrites probably mostly belonging to the Hamilton period, which is next to the coal or carboniferous period, and often contains traces of coal. It is hardly probable that any great beds of it exist in our State. The variety that is found is bituminous of good quality, and burns freely. In some localities blacksmiths have been able to obtain enough to run their forges. The above remarks are addressed especially to the many people throughout the State who occasionally find specimens of coal and are inclined to spend money and time in the vain hope of mining it in sufficient quantities to make it profitable.

FEMALE SWINDLERS.—They are generally irresistable to the sterner sex, they travel on their "winning ways," and get into the parlors before he knows it, and when they are justly punished, which is very seldom, fall back on the plea that their "sex protects them." Not long since a lady was driven in a hack up the ladies' entrance of one of our leading hotels, and was escorted to the ladies' parlor. She was dressed in the height of fashion, but very plainly, and seemed to be a quiet, unpretending lady. The only article of baggage she had with her was a small box, neatly wrapped up in manilla paper, with a shawl-strap attached, by means of which it was carried. This she seemed to handle with great care, and requested that it be placed in the private vault of the house and a receipt given for the same. She was a bewitching blonde, with a smile sweet enough to melt the heart of a Stylite. She entranced all the boarders, spent a pleasant week, and one bright morning started out to "do a little shopping," and for all that her friends in this house know is still shopping. After an absence of two or three days the proprietors' suspicions were at last aroused, and opening the aforesaid small box, which by the way was hermetically sealed with red sealing-wax, they found four bricks of the best Milwaukee manufacture.

VEGETINE

Purifies the Blood, Renovates and Invigorates the Whole System.

Its Medical properties are

Alterative, Tonic, Solvent, and Diuretic.

Vegetine is made exclusively from the juices of carefully selected barks, roots, and herbs, and so strongly concentrated that it will effectually eradicate from the system every taint of SCROFULA, SCROFULOUS HUMOR, TUMORS, CANCER, CANCEROUS HUMOR, ERYSIPELAS, SALT RHEUM, SYPHILITIC DISEASES, CANKER, FAINTNESS AT THE STOMACH, and all diseases that arise from impure blood. SCIATICA, INFLAMMATORY AND CHRONIC RHEUMATISM, NEURALGIA, GOUT, and SPINAL COMPLAINTS, can only be effectually cured through the blood.

For ULCERS and ERUPTIVE DISEASES of the SKIN, PUSTULES, PIMPLES, BLOTCHES, BOILS, TETTER, SCALDHEAD and RINGWORM, Vegetine has never failed to effect a permanent cure.

FOR PAINS IN THE BACK, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, DROPSY, FEMALE WEAKNESS, LEUCORRHŒA, arising from internal ulceration, and uterine diseases and GENERAL DEBILITY, Vegetine acts directly upon the causes of these complaints. It invigorates and strengthens the whole system, acts upon the secretive organs, allays inflammation, cures ulceration, and regulates the bowels.

For CATARRH, DYSPEPSIA, HABITUAL COSTIVENESS, PALPITATION OF THE HEART, HEADACHE, PILES, NERVOUSNESS, and GENERAL PROSTRATION OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM, no medicine has ever given such perfect satisfaction as the Vegetine. It purifies the blood, cleanses all of the organs, and possesses a controlling power over the nervous system.

The remarkable cures effected by Vegetine have induced many physicians and apothecaries whom we know to prescribe and use it in their own families.

In fact, VEGETINE is the best remedy yet discovered for the above diseases, and is the only reliable BLOOD PURIFIER yet placed before the public.

THE BEST EVIDENCE.

The following letter from Rev. E. S. Best, Pastor of M. E. Church, Natick, Mass., will be read with interest by many physicians, also those suffering from the same disease as afflicted the son of the Rev. E. S. Best. No person can doubt this testimony, as there is no doubt about the curative powers of VEGETINE.

NATICK, MASS., Jan. 1, 1874.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

Dear Sir,—We have good reason for regarding your VEGETINE a medicine of the greatest value. We feel assured that it has been the means of saving our son's life. He is now seventeen years of age. For the last two years he has suffered from necrosis of his leg, caused by scrofulous affection, and was so far reduced that nearly all who saw him thought his recovery impossible. A council of able physicians could give us but the faintest hope of his ever rallying, two of the number declaring that he was beyond the reach of human remedies, that even amputation could not save him, as he had not vigor enough to endure the operation. Just then we commenced giving him VEGETINE, and from that time to the present he has been continuously improving. He has lately resumed his studies, thrown away his crutches and cane, and walks about cheerfully and strong.

Though there is still some discharge from the opening where the limb was lanced, we have the fullest confidence that in a little time he will be perfectly cured.

He has taken about three dozen bottles of VEGETINE, but lately uses but little, as he declares that he is too well to be taking medicine.

Respectfully yours,

E. S. BEST,
MRS. L. C. F. BEST.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, Guardian of Grace A. Williams, minor Heir of Samuel Veazie, late of Veazie in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that said minor is seized and possessed of the following described real estate, viz: One undivided sixth part of an undivided third of all the real estate now remaining unsold, whereof said Veazie died seized and possessed, situate in Oldtown, Ellsworth, Bangor and in the County of Piscataquis, except the wild land and privileges at Oldtown.

That it would be for the benefit of said minor that said real estate should be sold, and the proceeds thereof put out at interest, or otherwise used for her benefit.

He therefore prays that license may be granted him to sell and convey the above described real estate at public or private sale, according to the requirement of law.

LETTER CARRIERS.

All letters are delivered free by carriers when addressed to street and number. People should inform their correspondents of above and have their letters addressed accordingly.

Persons leaving their address at the General Delivery can also have their letters sent, but it is much more convenient to have the street and number on, and they will be delivered earlier than if the same is put on at the office. Carriers make two deliveries daily, the first trip supplying the extremes of their routes.

Collections are made morning and evening in season for important mails—the down town boxes fifteen and the up town boxes thirty minutes before closing mails at the office.

Holidays the Carrier's Window will be open for the delivery of letters from 8 to 9½ A. M., and from 5 to 5½ P. M. Sundays from 8 to 9½ A. M.

Any irregularities in the Carriers' department should be reported to the office.

ENVELOPES.

No additional charge will be made for printing the name and request to return, across the left hand upper corner of the envelopes furnished by the Post Office Department, (samples of which may be seen at the Cashier's window,) when ordered in lots of not less than 500.

A request for the return of a letter to the writer, if unclaimed within thirty days, or less, written or printed, with the writer's name, post office and State, across the left end of the envelope, on the face side, will be complied with.

The public are earnestly recommended to procure Stamped envelopes with printed return request, as the expense is less, and letters thus endorsed, if not delivered to the person addressed, are returned to the writer free of charge.

First class envelopes of above furnished at $32 80 per thousand.

Stamps cut from Stamped Envelopes cannot be used to prepay postage. The use of such Stamps is punishable by a fine of fifty dollars. Stamped Envelopes, spoiled in directing, are redeemed at this office.

DOMESTIC POSTAGE.

FIRST CLASS.

All Letters must be Prepaid.—Letters for the Mails in the United States, three cents the half ounce or single rate. City letters, two cents half ounce or single rate.

SECOND CLASS.

Newspapers.

All regular newspapers must be prepaid at the office of publication, at the rate of two cents per pound for each issue on weekly papers or those published oftener than once a week, less frequently than once a week, three cents. The same law applies to dealers.

County papers free, except to letter carrier offices, the papers coming to this office, if published in County, are subject to postage. Daily papers published in County, if delivered by carrier, one cent each, to be prepaid by stamps.

Postage to Canada—Same as in the States on letters and papers, pre-payment compulsory; merchandise limited to 8 oz., postage 10 cents.

THIRD CLASS.

TRANSIENT PRINTED MATTER AND BOOKS AND MERCHANDISE.

One Cent for Two Ounces.

Almanacs, books (printed), calendars, catalogues, corrected proofs, hand bills, magazines, lithographed or engraved—music, printed sheets, newspapers, occasional publications, pamphlets, posters, proof sheets, prospectuses.

One cent for each ounce.

Blank books, blank cards, book manuscripts, card boards and other flexible materials, chromo lithographs, circulars, engravings, envelopes, flexible patterns, letter envelopes, letter paper, lithographs, merchandise, models, ornamental paper, postal cards when sent in bulk and not addressed, photographic views, photographic paper, printed blanks, printed cards, sample cards, samples of ores, metals, minerals and merchandise, seeds, cuttings, bulbs, roots and scions, stereoscopic views.

All packages of matter of third class must be so wrapped or enveloped, with open sides or ends, that their contents may be readily and thoroughly examined by postmasters without destroying the wrappers.

The sender of a package of third class matter may write his or her name on the wrapper with the word "from," but nothing more, without subjecting the whole to letter postage.

ADVERTISED LETTERS.

All letters remaining in the office are advertised on Monday of each week. If not claimed in one month thereafter, they are then forwarded to the Dead Letter office.

MONEY ORDERS.

Especial attention is called to the Money Order system, as a safe and cheap method of transmitting small sums through the mails. Orders are issued for sums of not more than fifty dollars. Larger amounts can be transmitted to the same person, at the same time, by additional orders.

RATES.

On orders not exceeding $15, 10 cents.
" over $15 and not exceeding $30, 15 cents.
" over $30 and not exceeding $40, 20 cents.
" over $40 and not exceeding $50, 25 cents.

Money Orders can also be obtained on England, Ireland, Scotland, Wales, Switzerland and German States.

Never put Money in a Letter—Always Procure a Money Order.

If money is to be remitted, a Postal Money Order should be obtained. If upon points where there is no Money Order Office, then the letter should be Registered. Money should never be enclosed in an ordinary letter.

Office Hours—From A. M. to 5 P. M.

REGISTRY DEPARTMENT.

All valuable letters should be Registered, unless a Money Order is obtained. Under the present system of Registration, letters are transmitted with perfect safety.

Letters may be Registered by paying postage in full and a Registration fee in stamps, for—
United States, 10 cents.
Great Britain and Ireland, and all Countries having a postal treaty with the United States, 10 cents.

Office Hours—From 8 A. M. to 6 P. M.

To the Honorable Judge of Probate for the County of Penobscot:

The undersigned, administrator of the estate of John Y. McGenney, late of Bangor, in said county, deceased, respectfully represents that the goods and chattels, rights and credits of said deceased are not sufficient to pay his just debts and charges of administration, by the sum of five hundred dollars or more.

Wherefore your petitioner prays your Honor to grant him a license to sell, at public or private sale and convey the whole of the late homestead of said deceased, situate on French Street in said Bangor, as the residue would be greatly depreciated by the sale of any portion thereof, for the said debts, expenses of sale, and charges of administration.

Said real estate is the same described in a deed recorded in the Registry of Deeds of said County.
